WASHINGTON, D. C., OCT. 29, 1885

B. McClellan will be a source of pro found regret, not only to the large circle of friends who appreciated his excellent qualities of mind and heart. but to thousands of surviving veteranwho served with him in the war and to the country in general, which gratefully remembers his services. General McClellan was perhaps the most so verely criticised of any of the great Union commanders for apparent failures in the accomplishment of definite results, but no question has ever been raised as to his skill in organization of courage in the field. It was his misfortune rather than his fault that he was entrusted with a vast responsibility during the political half of the war, and when the politi cians at Washington knew more of military matters than the generals in the field. He had enemies in the rear ns well as enemies at the front, and considering the circumstances of the times, the inexperience of even our trained soldiers in actual warfare and the influences that so long held prejudi cial sway, as though politics was an in separable element of the pending struggle, the fame of George B. McClellan rests upon a secure and honorable basis. LET US HAVE PEACE.

There is no sense in going back to ancient history to dig up dead issues and rattle their skeletons before th public with the expectation that any body will believe they have come to life again or possess the slightest vital importance.

This is a progressive age, owing much, it is true, to the cumulative experience of the past, but owing more to itself for a wise use of that experience. Its responsibilities for the future are too momentous to permit of its loitering by the wayside to indulge In retrospective controversy

For this reason we were sorry to see the challenge lately thrown out by Chauncey M. Depew to the friends of the late President Johnson, to admit or disprove the truth of his imputations upon the memory of that distinguished statesman. That these imputation were based upon the writer's recoiled tions of what was said at a more or less tipsy dinner party did not relieve them of the tendency or intention to provoke an angry and utterly useless disputa- that it is the "castor oil of polities." tention over an episode in the history | The law must be repealed at once. of the country which the sincere patriot may well wish were blotted from its pages, and in the presence of which, were all its oulous facts laid bare, many reputations that time has kindly left unscathed would be covered with shame and the loyalty of Andrew Johnson gleam with all the brighter effulgence by comparison.

Fortunately for all concerned, the discussion is not likely to be prolonged The public mind is evidently not in a mood to reopen a case in which judgment has already been passed. It has no ghoulish yearning to invade the sanctuary of the dead that their graves may be dishonored. It has no time to waste in dallying with the ghosts of a dead past. President Johnson and General Grant have gone to their long account, and the generations that are receding from the period in which they stood in immediate official relations to one another will do impartial justice to their memory without seeking to be cloud the mellow haze that enfoldtheir fame

Nothing in the nature of a panoramic reproduction of the passions and hatreds and stealthy persecutions that beset the executive pathway of Abraham Lincoln's successor is wanted for the entertainment of this more just and gentler age. The worst of those ignoble passions have long since burnt to ashes on the altar of atonement. The them. Let us have peace.

yesterday resulted in the election of Jumes Hodges, the Democratic candidate for Mayor, and nineteen Democrats to eleven Independents in the two branches of the City Council. Eight of the eleven Independents are Repub Heans. The canvass had been an animated and somewhat personal one, but the election was happily free of disorder, and passed off in that respect to everybody's satisfaction. The San predicts well of the new administration while conceding all the merit due to the Fusion ticket. The American in dulges in no lengthy comments upon the result, but of course is not so well pleased as it might be, and suggest that as "the Reform lamp still holds out to burn the vilest ringster can yet return and vote the Independent legis lative ticket" next week--which the sitmer is not likely to do. As Pr WILL require forty or fifty thousand dollars more to place the Golden of Liberty securely on her pedestal, why wouldn't it be a good scheme for the trustees of the Grant monument fund to loan that amount to the trustees of the Bartholdi statue fund, taking a mertgage on the Goddess for security? It will be some time before the trustees of the Grant monument fund will need the money if they are waiting to raise a million, and the ninety odd thousand dollars they have on hand might better be leaned out they locked up. Mean while the Goddess can be creeted, and at a charge of twenty five cents a head to visitors who desire to explore the internal anatomy of this modern Column will seen pay for herself.

Ir with never do for the President to exclude himself from the office seek ing public. His late order will not b Commander in Chief of the Army and Navy will be able to enforce it. The Democratic party is just now much more interested in the distribution of patronage than it is in the forthcoming message to Congress. It is one of the Inexprable incidents of the Presidential office to be bothered by the spolls hunt ers, and the latter by pracedent as well as principle will instat upon being card. Otherwise there will be mutiny in the camp.

THE Signal Service men who united n a petition against a mighty seconcutenant, who swore at them as if he elenged to the army in Flanders, are by the army regulations food for ourt-martial. This is clearly the case. But the average citizen cannot see exactly why a mighty second licatement who uses profane language towards the men under him should not also be meat for a court-martial. Are we to understand that cursing like a brute is "conduct" becoming "an officer and a

"The day is passed," says Mr. Ramsey of the Utah Commission, "when we can wipe out Mormonism by force. It can only now be killed by the apllances of law and moral suasion. This is a reasonable view of the matter. Polygamy will soon grow tired of lenely languishment in jail and three hundred-dollar fines, and sooner or later learn to relish a matrimonial system that is not so expensively handicapped.

SALVINI, who intends to play "Coridanus," said the other day, when speaking about the tragedy, "I can hardly believe that Shakspeare did not know me when he wrote it." Yes, Shakspeare missed a great many things by dying so soon. He even missed knowing the "Count Johannes" and Ignatius Donnelly.

THE New York Republicans say that when President Cleveland arrives in that city an effort will be made to secure from him an indorsement of the Democratic State ticket. People generally think that a $1,000 check is a pretty good indorsement of any ticket, and beats talk about seven days out of
